IRISHMAN LEADS FIELD IN BRITISH OPEN

Nolan Breaks Course
Record With 67.

SARAZEN TEN STROKES BEHIND THE LEADER

Lacey Tears Up Card

London, To-day.
Playing superb golf Nolan broke the St. Andrew's course record with a faultless 67 to lead the 280 competitors in the final qualifying round of the British Open Golf Championship yesterday.

The American invaders all proved successful. Gene Sarazen, the holder, returned a card of 148—ten strokes behind Nolan.

Among the leading British players Archie Compston is up with the leaders, but Percy Alliss failed to qualify and Alfred Lacey tore up his card.

George Dunlop, the American who reached the semi-final of the British Amateur, failed to produce the form that gave him a first round card of 71, and Olin Dutra, the American Ryder Cup player, also failed to keep his place among the leaders.

The principal cards, as cabled by Reuters, are:—

Nolan (Ireland) 71+67=138
Horton Smith (U.S.A.) 71+71=142
Archie Compston (Britain) 73+74=147
Joe Kirkwood (Australia) 73+74=147
Gene Sarazen (U.S.A.) 73+75=148
Intense heat again prevailed during the final qualifying round and the fast condition of the turf caused sensations in the afternoon round.

Alfred Lacey, who lost 2 and 1 to Walter Hazen in the Ryder Cup contest, tore up his card to set a new precedent in the history of the championship. Such a thing had not been done before.

Nolan, the Irish professional from Portmarnock, broke the old course record of 68, held jointly by Bobby Jones (U.S.A.) and George Duncan (Britain) with a faultless 67.

With a 71 in the first round Nolan led the qualifying field with an aggregate score of 138.

Horton Smith, "the American Henry Cotton," who led in the first round with a 71, is second with an aggregate of 142.

Hong Kong for the time being is not to be directly linked with the Shanghai-Canton air-mail service, but it is hoped to include the Colony at a later date. Meanwhile, one mail will leave Kai Tak on Monday next for the Northern port by the China National Airways plane which arrived here from Swatow this morning.

The Shanghai-Canton service, linking up with Chinese coast towns, is to be put into operation immediately.

These statements were made this morning by Mr. H. M. Bixby who is in charge of the organisation of the new service, shortly after his arrival together with five other officials.

The giant Sikorsky twin-engine bi-plane, landed at Kai Tak aerodrome after a satisfactory flight, shortly after 11.30 this morning.

ROOSEVELT BACK AT WHITE HOUSE

RECESS OBTAINED TILL TO-MORROW

"COOLING-OFF" PERIOD FOR DELEGATES

STRONG CRITICISM VOICED OF ROOSEVELT ATTITUDE

IT IS HOPED IN AMERICAN QUARTERS THAT THE RECESS OBTAINED AT THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE, WILL PROVE A "COOLING OFF" PERIOD IN WHICH THE DELEGATIONS WILL HAVE A CHANCE TO FORGET PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S STINGING WORDS.

Mr. William Cordell Hull explained yesterday evening that he had asked for a 24-hour recess in order to talk things over with both the British and American delegates with the hope that within the next two days the Conference situation can be resumed and an economic policy formulated on which work can proceed.

The Americans are known to desire further discussions on price-raising and other countries believe that President Roosevelt greatly desires the Conference to continue and therefore, that he will make a great effort to this end.

YESTERDAY MORNING'S MEETING OF THE STEERING COMMITTEE AND THE EVENING MEETING OF THE BUREAU WERE CHARACTERISED BY MUCH STRONG CRITICISM OF THE ATTITUDE OF THE UNITED STATES FROM THE HIGHEST QUARTERS, BUT, OUT OF COURTESY TO AMERICA, THE REQUEST FOR AN ADJOURNMENT OF THE BUREAU WAS GRANTED WITHOUT TAKING A VOTE.—REUTER.

RECESS SECURED BY AMERICANS

Dramatic Finish To Meetings.

FRANCE AND ITALY YIELD TO HULL'S SUGGESTION

London, To-day.
The following are the events leading up to the dramatic finish of the World Economic Conference.

Yesterday morning's meeting of the Bureau appointed a committee to draft the final resolution, composing the British Premier, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, M. Bonnet, French Finance Minister, and the Dutch Premier, Dr. Colijn.

At 3 p.m., the committee had almost agreed to the resolution, noting the results obtained at the Conference and stating the reasons necessitating its adjournment.

While the discussion was proceeding, a messenger brought Mr. MacDonald a note from the delegation of the United States, asking for a postponement of the meeting of the Bureau fixed for 6 p.m., as they had an important communication to make.

Mr. MacDonald suspended the meeting and conversed for half an hour with one of the American delegates and then told the Drafting Committee that the United States Secretary of State, Mr. William Cordell Hull, had found it impossible to reach President Roosevelt. Therefore the delegation was unable to decide regarding the adjournment of the Conference.

Mr. MacDonald, however, decided that the Bureau should meet at 8 p.m. At the meeting, Mr. MacDonald, on (Continued on Page 12.)

AMERICANS TRY TO PROLONG
LIFE OF CONFERENCE

London, earlier.

The Bureau of the World Economic Conference has been adjourned till to-morrow.

Though it is generally thought that the Conference will end on Thursday it is not a foregone conclusion.

The Americans are doing their utmost to prolong its life in order to avoid the already voiced opinion that President Roosevelt has "torpedoed" the Conference.—REUTER.

SILVER COMMITTEE TO REPORT LATER

London, To-day.

The silver sub-committee under the Chairmanship of Senator Key Pittman, yesterday, discussed the progress of the conversations with reference to a conclusion and an understanding between producers of silver and large holders of stocks.

The meeting decided to pursue the conversations privately, and report when a satisfactory stage has been reached.—REUTER.

Washington, To-day.

President Roosevelt arrived at the White House last night, and has cabled fresh instructions to the United States delegation in London to exert every effort to keep the World Economic Conference going.

President Roosevelt's instructions were coded and dispatched through the United States Navy Department.

It is authoritatively stated that President Roosevelt has every confidence that the Conference will not break up and that the American delegation would be able to act to keep it in progress.

The text of the cable has not been disclosed, and it is stated that any news will have to come from London.—REUTER.

COTTON TRADE COMPETITION

Japan Better Organised
Than Lancashire.

NEGOTIATIONS PROCEEDING WITH TOKIO

London, To-day.

During the course of last night's debate on the Board of Trade estimates, Major C. R. Atlee, winding up for the Labour Party told the House of Commons that the success of the Japanese in the cotton trade was due to their extremely efficient organisation as much as to low wages. Lancashire should reorganise her industry on similar lines.

The usual criticisms regarding the abnormally low wages, conditions of labour and hours operating in Japan, were heard, the Conservative member for Stockport, Mr. S. S. Hammersley, declaring that there was not a market in the world which did not feel the menace of the extraordinarily cheap competition.

DISUNITY IN CHINA

London, To-day.

Commenting on the cablegram received from the South-west Political Council at Canton, referring to reports that Mr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Finance Minister is trying to negotiate loans abroad and declaring that any such loan will be "nationally repudiated," the "Morning Post," while admitting that it does not know by what authority the Council speaks, states that the statement illustrates the present disunity in China and is a useful caution against granting credits to the Chinese Government at present.—REUTER.

The visit of Mr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Finance Minister and leader of the Chinese delegation to the World Economic Conference, to London is drawing to a close.

Yesterday afternoon he saw the Foreign Minister, Sir John Simon, at the Foreign Office and then went to the World Economic Conference to bid good-bye to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

The date of Mr. Soong's departure is not yet fixed but it will probably be towards the week-end. On the journey to China he will complete his series of visits to Continental capitals, calling at Rome and probably at other places.—REUTER.

WIMBLEDON SURPRISES

Miss Round Only British
Semi-Finalist

FAVOURITES BEATEN IN MEN'S DOUBLES

Day Of Sensations

London, To-day.
Dorothy Round (Britain), Helen Jacobs (U. S. A.), Fraulein Krahwinkel (Germany) and Mrs. Williams (U. S. A. and holder), all of whom are seeded players, have reached the Semi-Final Round of the Women's Singles at Wimbledon.

Sensational play featured the Men's Doubles match. The leading American pair, L. J. Stoeffen and Clifford Sutter, were eliminated by a lesser known British combination; Quist and Turnbull, Australia's No. 2 pair, were beaten by the only New Zealand entrants; and Hughes and Perry were extended to 57 games against a young French pair.

Yesterday Fraulein Krahwinkel, the 1931 finalist, caused a sensation when she eliminated Margaret Scriven, the British left-handed player. The German girl did well to win the first set off the winner of French Championship at Auteuil, lost the second set, and then rallied brilliantly to win the final set at 6-1.

Helen Jacobs, last year's finalist, proved altogether too good for Mme. Mathieu, the French champion. Dorothy Round displayed encouraging form to beat Mlle. Valerio, the Spanish champion, in straight sets.

Playing in her second match of the day Dorothy Round, in partnership with Mary Heeley, suffered a straight sets defeat in the Women's Doubles. The British Wightman Cup pair and one of the seeded four, lost the first set to Freda James and Miss Yorke at 6-1 and lost in straight sets at 8-6 after a stirring struggle.

The fine progress of T. Aoki and Miss Feltham was checked in the Fourth Round of the Mixed Doubles when J. V. Kirby and Mlle. Sigart won in three sets.

R. Nuno, and Miss Noel beat A. Stedman, and Miss Wright in convincing manner.

Fraulein Krahwinkel (Germany) beat Margaret Scriven (Britain) 6-4, 3-6, 6-1.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES

Fourth Round
Freda James and Miss Yorke (Britain) beat Mary Heeley and Dorothy Round (Britain) 8-1, 8-6.

The Chin And Throat

How To Keep Them Youthfully Firm.

In order to keep the contours of the chin and throat youthfully full and firm till late in life it is necessary as the Negro song says, "to watch out" and begin treatment before the signs of age appear, which they are apt to do round about the early thirties or even before (writes Margaret Hallam in the "Daily Mail").

Treatment must be given for both the skin and the muscles. In order to keep the former unlined, fine in texture, and a good colour, wash the neck at bed-time with really hot water, applying plenty of friction with a well-soaped loofah, especially at the back of the neck, behind and under the ears and chin. Finish by bathing well with cold water.

In the morning bath with cold water to which a tablespoonful of the cheapest white wine has been added. This acts as a slight astringent.

Occasionally rub the whole surface over with a slice of lemon, after the neck has been dried, and let this dry on.

Twice a week at the night, before using the cold sponge, moisten the fingers of both hands with a cream and bring the fingers in long, sweeping strokes from the chin to the base of the throat. Then tilt the head back and bring the fingers firmly across the chin from ear to ear using the hands alternately for five minutes. If the glands are tender all massage movements must be omitted.

In order to keep the throat and chin firm do the following exercise five times each night and morning for three weeks, stop for three weeks, and do them again. After this leave them off for a couple of months unless the neck is very thin or the chin in much need of subjection, because if neck exercises are overdone the throat becomes too thick.

Move the head very slowly back far as ever it will go, then forward, thrusting out the chin well.

Turn the head slowly as far to the right as it will go, then to the left.

The next exercises are adapted from singing. These can be practised day in and day out of all the year round—provided you haven't an audience, seen or unseen! They are good for the health as well as beauty, and cannot fail if properly done to keep the throat and contours of the jaw very young.

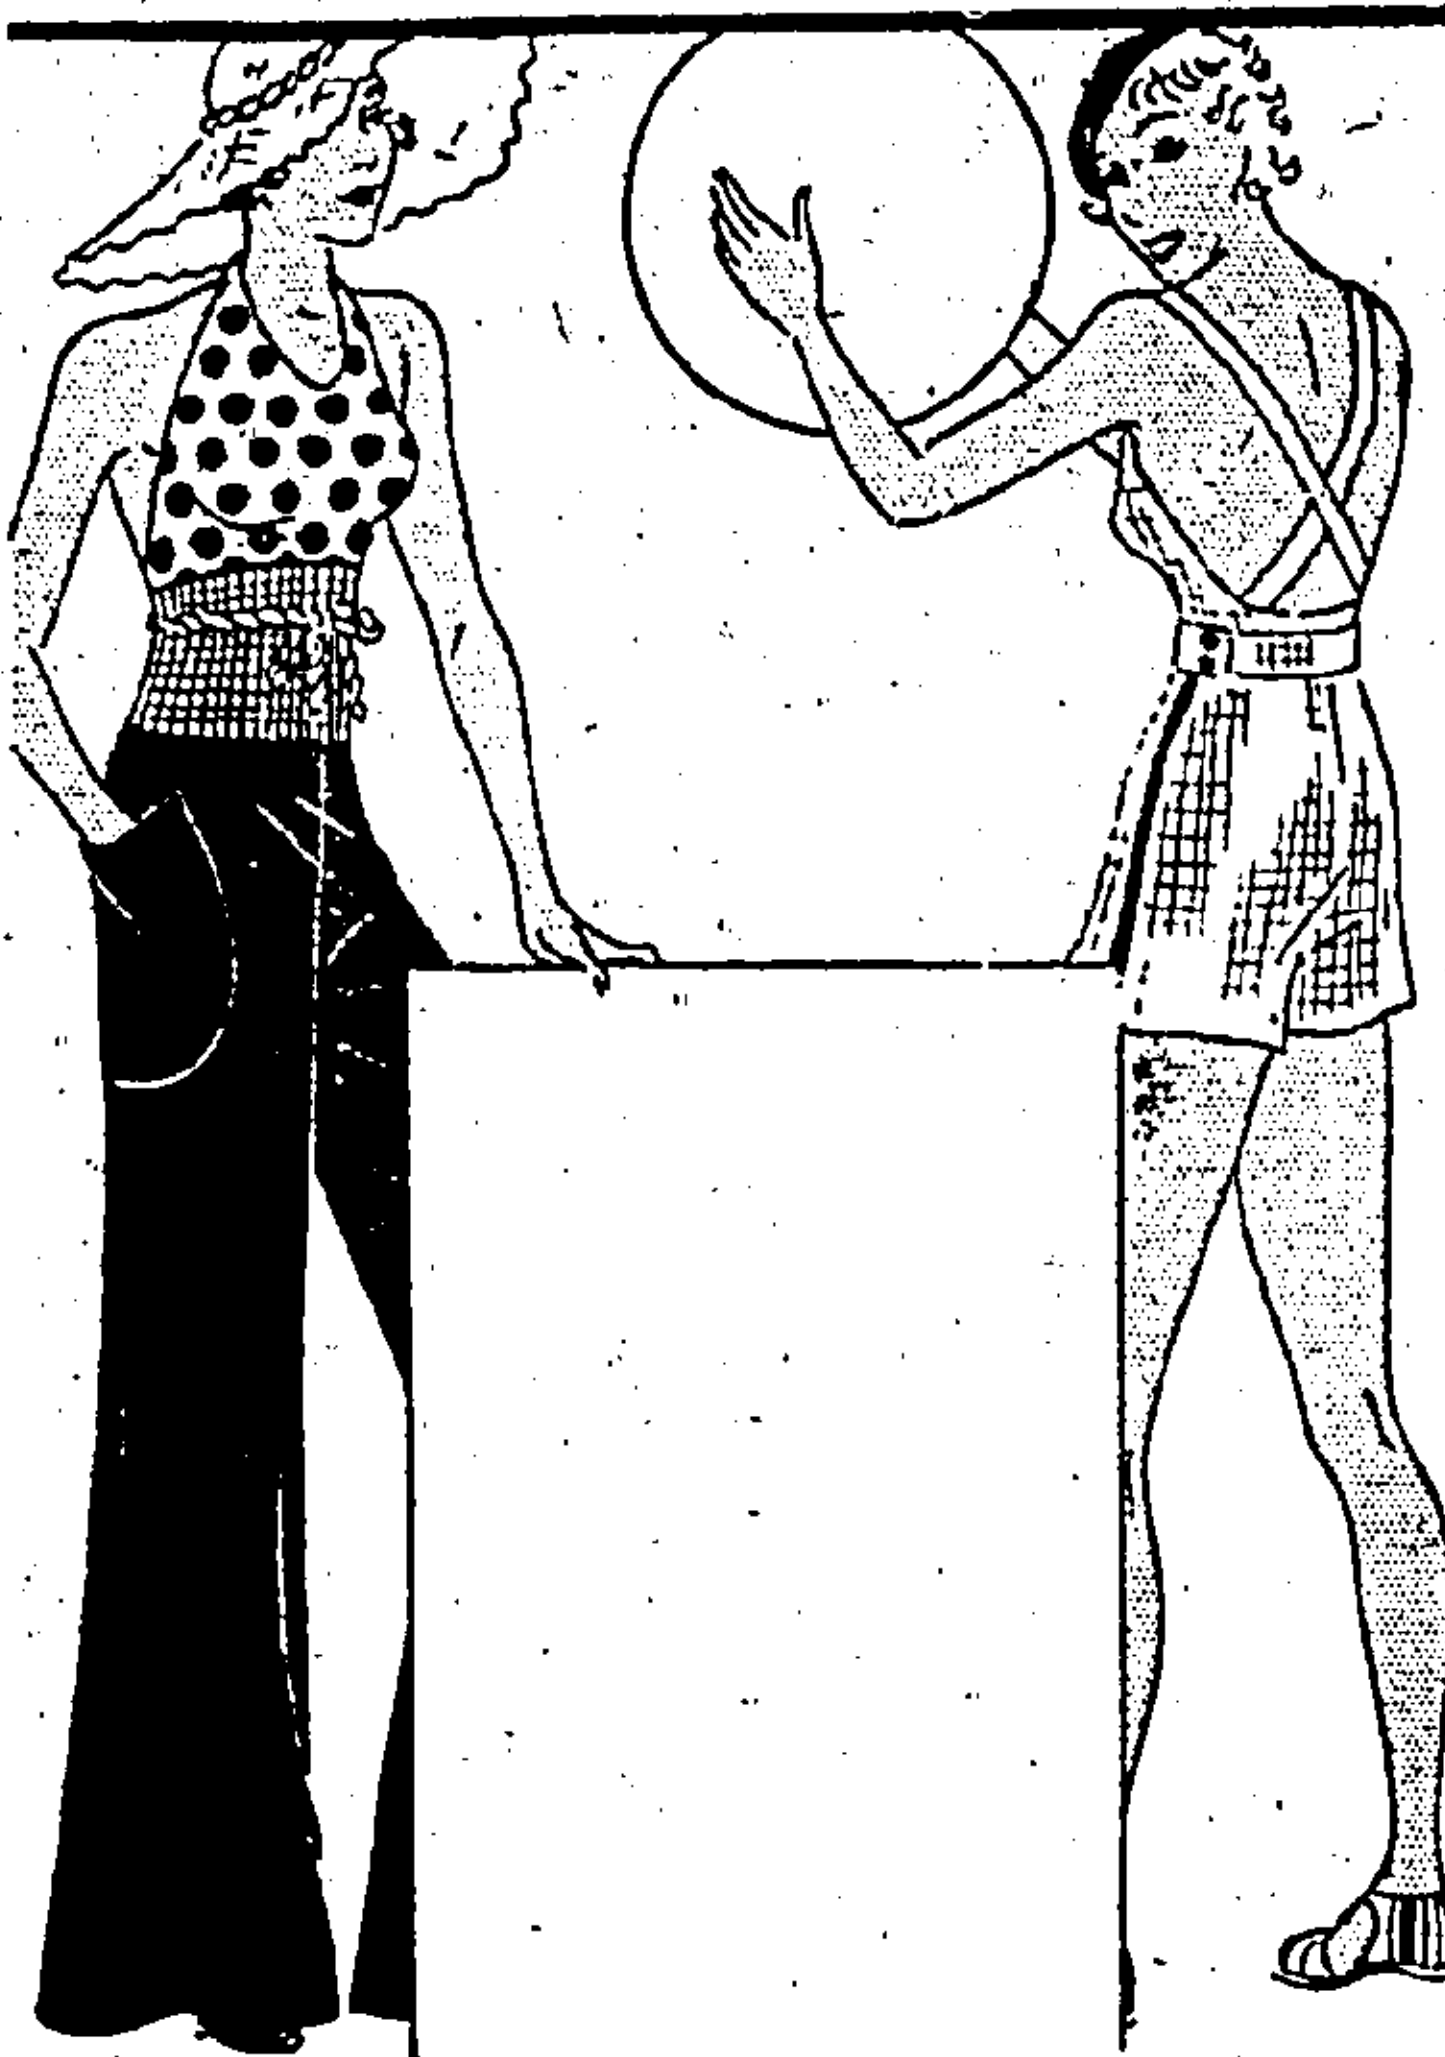

Take a deep breath and whisper the vowels Ah, Ay, Ee, O, Oo, beginning on middle "C" and ascending the scale for an octave. Dwell on each note, making it as long-drawn-out as possible; and don't be afraid of pulling what the children call faces.

Reading aloud is also a good throat exercise.

The same exercises should be used whether the throat and chin are too full or too scraggy, because the tendency of such is to restore to the normal.

CAT'S WHISKER SCARVES

Cat's whisker scarves of stitched organdie, gingham or crepe are worn with the new low-necked coats. They are fixed like a bow beneath the chin and are generally white, so as to keep the coat collar clean.

RUBBER BATHING SUITS.

Girdles And Brassieres Also Popular.

The success of the rubber bathing suits is making women again rubber minded. The elastic mind state is a rather nice state to be in at that. Anyway, rubber girdles and brassieres are snapping back into good standing.

They seem to be landscaped a little more modernly. The vents are more appealing—that is, there are more of them, which gives sort of a lacey effect to the girdle.

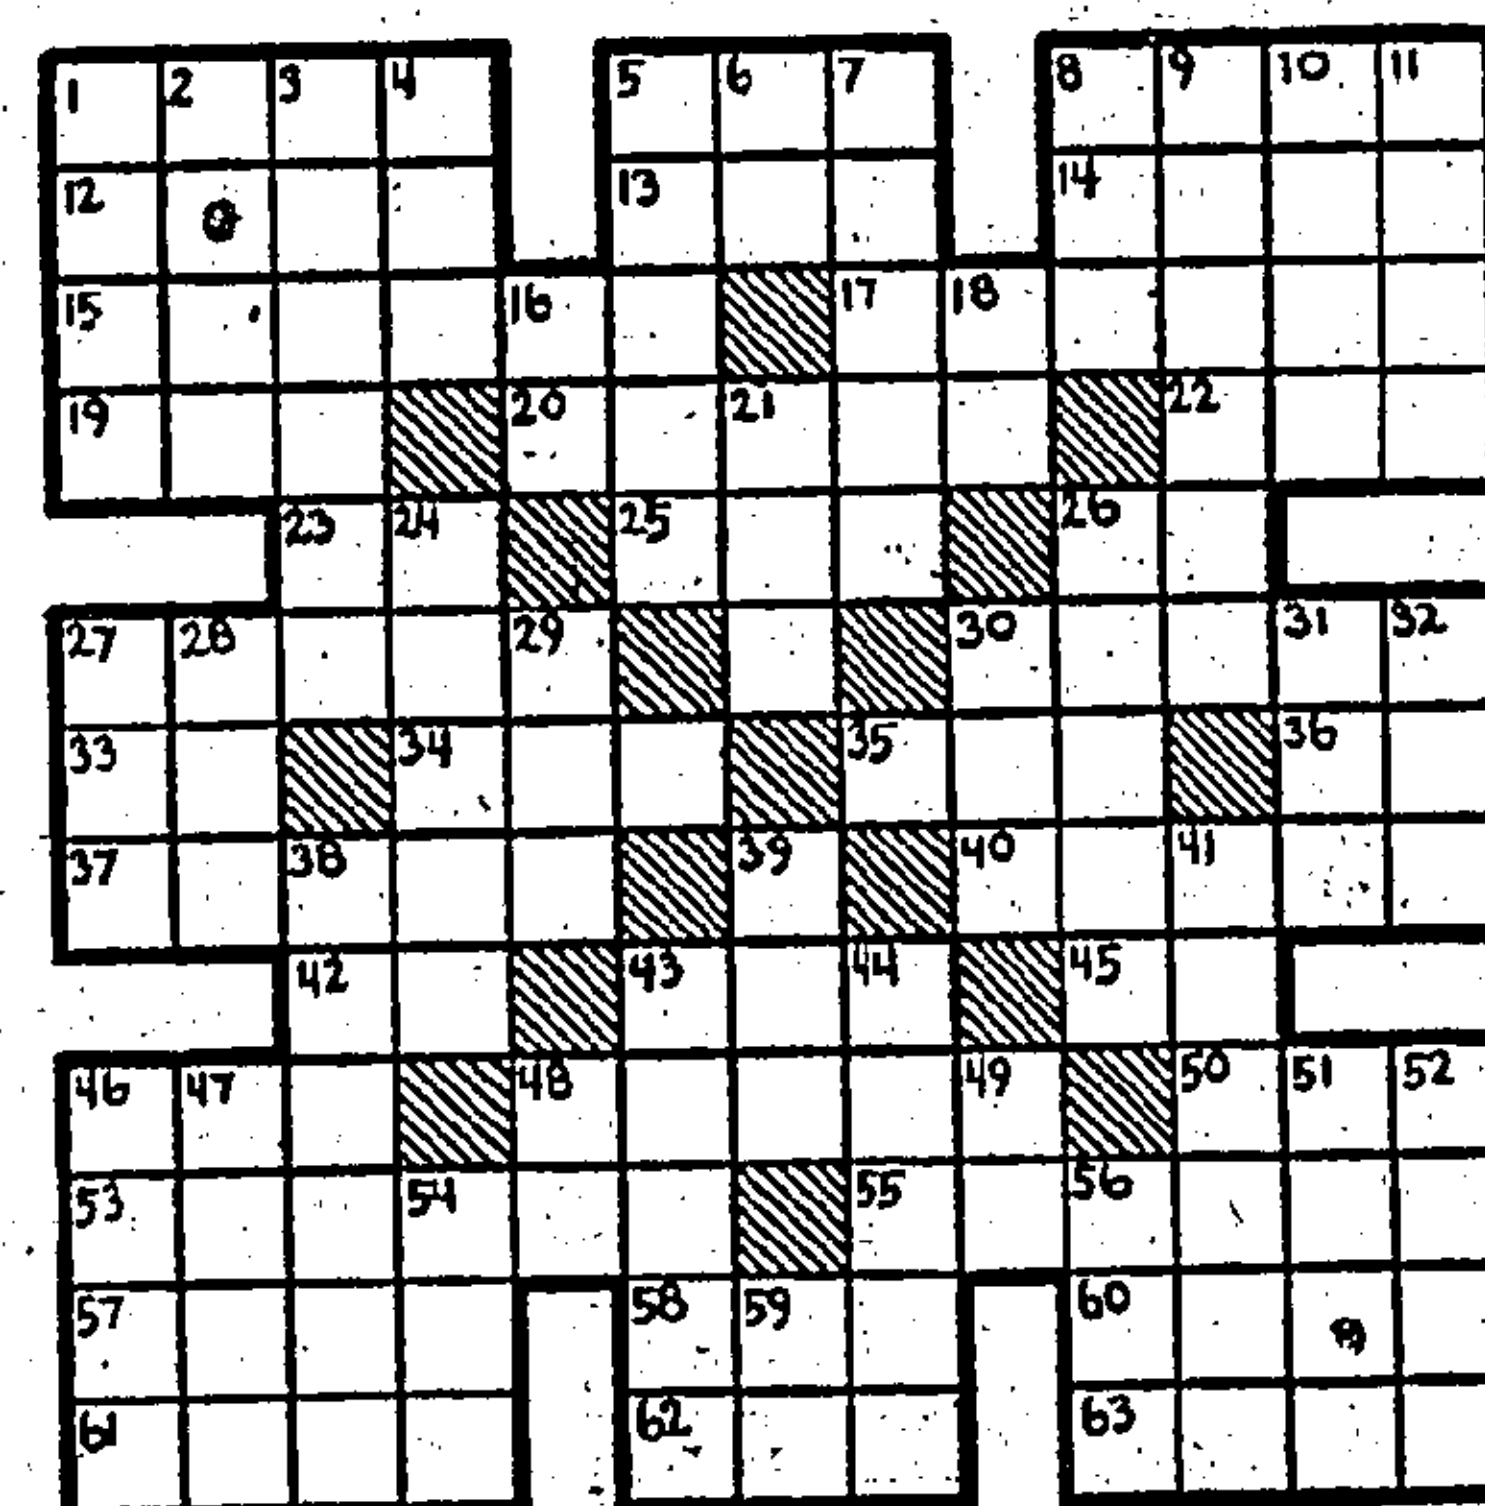

There's more sense to the colours than in the last rubber band era, and one gets a good value of compactness without losing natural curves and geographical contour.

BRIDGE NOTES

CULBERTSON
CONTRACT
(By ELY CULBERTSON)
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

The new laws for tournament play, recently released by the United States Bridge Association, include a provision that a team-of-four may paradoxically consist of five members.

My associates, Messrs. Oswald Jacoby and Walter Malowan, pondering on this paradox, though the idea might well be extended. In their opinion, a team of five is not enough. They believe the ideal team-of-four at Bridge should consist of at least fourteen players, made up as follows:

Four bidders—Experts who will bid the hands, and who, as specialists in bidding, will not be expected to play the cards.

Two Dummy players (only two will be necessary). Assuming our side to be the Declarer, the bidding member will give his place to one of the Dummy players, who will proceed to squeeze out an extra trick.

Four defensive players—These players will specialize in brilliant leads, deceptive discards and end-plays.

One pinch bidder, who occasionally will be called in when one of the regular bidders is at a loss as to the correct bid. He will also be particularly valuable in bidding Grand Slams, and will be expected to put in an hour's practice daily in the bidding of Small and Grand Slams.

One Doubler, who will decide on close Doubles. Usually, one of the four defensive players will also take over the job of Doubler.

Two "goat-getters"—These will be good, all-round players, who particularly annoy certain members of opposing teams. These will be the real pinch-hitters, as they will be brought in the game only against special opponents whose "goat" they will get. Of course, the manager of an opposing team, when he sees a "goat-getter" enter the game, can put in one of his own "goat-getters."

The above list of players should probably be sufficient for minor team matches, but when a team is engaged in a major league contest, it should consist of twenty-five members, including specialists in card-dropping, end-plays, squeezes, notrump hands, major and minor suit hands falsecarding, and the like.

In this connection, my associates have started the development of the unbeatable team and expect to extend invitations to the following players:

Bidders—Mr. Harold S. Vanderbilt and Mr. Waldemar von Zedtwitz; not only expert bidders, but specialists in tiring out the opponents before the next players get in. They would be assisted by such players as Mr. Edward Hymes, Jr., and Mr. Samuel Fry, Jr., who would go the distance themselves.

For Dummy players, they suggest Mr. Theodore A. Lightner and me—Mr. Lightner for deception and me for brilliant attack.

On defense—Any four players including Mr. Willard S. Karm and Mr. Michael T. Gottlieb, who would be the natural captains, probably assisted by Mr. E. A. Wetzel and Mr. Howard Schenker. Mr. Gottlieb would also be a Doubler.

Mrs. Josephine Culbertson and Mr. Louis H. Watson would be the pinch bidders, and would be called into the game either for Slams or for cases where one player had been temporarily demoralized by his partner. They would take the place of the partner.

Mr. H. Huber Boscowitz would occupy a special position of cheer-leader and sympathizer with the players who are taken out of the game for errors. He would also be called upon to drop singleton Kings on occasion.

Mr. William J. Huske, Editor of The Bridge World, has insisted upon becoming specialist in two notrump contracts, while Mr. Walter Malowan has preserved the right to play other notrump contracts.

Mr. Oswald Jacoby will play all hopeless hands to go down as little as possible. Mr. Jacoby, through his psychic bidding, has had years of experience in playing hopeless contracts.

Mrs. Emory Clement will have a special job of underleading Aces, and Mrs. O. J. Hilliard is reserved to counteract overbidding tendencies of any other players.

Mr. David Burnstine becomes chief of the "goat-getters," to be assisted by Mr. Raymond Balfe and Mr. P. Hal Sims, neither of whom has been able to compete with Mr. Burnstine's offering of chewing-gum to a lady who was playing a difficult contract.

In addition to the players, there will be a large staff of nonplayers, such as the manager, the trainer, the alibi artist, the weeper, the glazer and three gloaters—the latter to be called in, in case one pair of players has achieved magnificent results, to take the place of these players and shake hands across the table.

"VARIETY PROGRAMME"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

The Queen's Theatre is now showing a variety programme of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions. The programme includes as a feature the two popular characters, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, in a short comedy entitled "The Laurel and Hardy Murder Case," which is thoroughly amusing.

Other attractions include a colour-tone burlesque, "A Hollywood Premiere," Charlie Chase, in "Happy Marriage," a Cartoon, Flip the Frog in "Africa Squeals," and "Microscopic Mystery," which is a clever film of arts greatly enlarged.

The latest Hearst Metrophone News-film is also shown.

"THE HALF NAKED TRUTH"—CENTRAL THEATRE

Lupe Velez, the Spanish actress, is seen as a specialty dancer, in company with the fastest talker of the films, Lee Tracy, in "The Half Naked Truth," which is now showing at the Central Theatre.

Instead of a newspaper reporter, Lee Tracy now takes the part of an energetic press-agent. His clever "line of talk" is material in leading Lupe Velez, a second-rate dancer, to the highest point of her career.

The film is a fast moving one with a delightful romance moving throughout the story.

The supporting cast includes Eugene Pallette and Frank Morgan, who are seen at their best.

"DANGER LIGHTS"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

"Danger Lights," now showing at the Oriental Theatre is a spectacular railroad drama. The film is notable as one of the last pictures made by Louis Wolheim, hero of "All Quiet on the Western Front" before his death. Robert Armstrong and Jean Arthur also star in this production.

The story is taken from true railroad life and contains many thrilling episodes.

"THEY JUST HAD TO GET MARRIED"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

"They Just Had to Get Married," at the Majestic Theatre, features those two comedians, Slim Summerville, and Zazu Pitts. They are both employed as servants, and on the death of their employer, he left them all his money; the consequence was that "they just had to get married."

Slim Summerville is his usual laughable self, and Zazu Pitts of the waving hands excels herself in this picture.

"MARRY ME"—KING'S THEATRE

The numerous admirers of Renate Muller's art since her brilliant performance in "Sunshine Susie" will be delighted with another bright Gainsborough musical, "Marry Me," now showing at the King's Theatre.

A fine cast is in support of Miss Muller, and includes such names as Harry Green, George Robey, Ian Hunter, and Sunday Wilshin.

Some of the most useful numbers yet heard in talking films are presented in this production. It does not pretend to be lavish nor elaborate, but all the characters are natural, which gives it a wonderful appeal. It is a lovely and adequate successor to "Sunshine Susie."

The story tells of the love of Ann Linden, a pretty recordist in a modernistic gramophone factory, for Robert Hart, (Ian Hunter) a fellow employee, one of three brothers who share a happy-go-lucky flat. When Ann's affections are not reciprocated she has recourse to a marriage bureau run by Harry Green, which puts her in touch with a wealthy Hungarian farmer (George Robey). But the romance ends in the only possible way.

"BROADWAY BAD"—STAR THEATRE

Ricardo Cortez who rose to stardom with his magnificent portrayal of a Jewish boy in "The Symphony of Six Million" is starred in "Broadway Bad," now showing at the Star Theatre.

The story is centred round a girl's rise to fame on the impetus of an unsavoury reputation.

Cortez who plays the New York man-about-town, is only interested in feminine beauty, until he meets "the girl" and falls in love with her.

"RUSSIA'S HOUR IS APPROACHING"

End Of Communism Prophesied.

GRAND DUKE'S DENUNCIATION

Paris. An impassioned indictment of the Bolshevik regime is contained in a proclamation issued by the Grand Duke Cyril, head of the Russian Imperial House, who writes:—

"I accuse the present governors of Russia of having, during 15 years of despotic rule, brought the Russian people nothing but innumerable ills."

"In the course of the years of suffering the people have been reduced to the worst misery and the country has been soaked in blood."

"Industrialisation, reorganisation of the workers' and peasants' lives, which, according to the promises of the Communists, should lead to the well-being of the population, have by their fault resulted in ruin and desolation."

"The Communist power in the course of these fatal years has reaped nothing but hatred and malediction."

The Grand Duke Cyril then prophesies an overthrow of the Soviet regime. He continues:—

"Discord reigns between those who hold power. Everything proves that the hour of judgment is near. The dawn of a new era which already illumines the future of humanity is throwing its beams over martyred Russia. The Nationalist movement already foretells the near end of Communism."

"Present governors of Russia, it is time to accuse you before the whole world of the crimes of which you are guilty. You alone are responsible for all the sufferings endured by the Russian nation."

"Present governors of Russia, an inexorable fate condemns you, for everything that goes against Nature is doomed to inevitable ruin."

"Enough of suffering. The Russian nation will no longer be trodden under foot. Russia is reawakening. The hour of triumph of the national forces is approaching."—Reuter.

RALPH LYNN AS
ACTOR-MANAGER.*Will Not Work All Year Round.

When Mr. Ralph Lynn, the comedian, next appears in a new play he will be an actor-manager, the beginning of a new chapter in his stage career. The present one ended recently, when, with the withdrawal of "A Bit of a Test" from the Aldwych, the Tom Walls-Ralph Lynn-Ben Travers partnership will be no more.

Mr. Lynn said:

"In a sense my partnership with Tom has already been broken, for it is two years since we played together. When he got over his riding fall he was disinclined to work on the stage as well as the films. Moreover, it is by no means easy to get plays with two big parts.

"Frankly, I have not greatly enjoyed the last couple of years. I got tired, and when it came to finishing one play on a Saturday and beginning another on the Monday—well, I found that I was not so young as I had been.

"My agreement came to an end in March, but obviously I could not step out until the play had finished its run. Now I hope to go abroad.

"In eleven years I have saved a bit of money; enough, I hope, to let me work just when I feel like it. Six months' work in the year would suit me admirably.

"If I find the right play I shall present myself in it in the autumn. Whether the cast will include members of the magnificent Aldwych team will depend, of course, upon the play."

DE LASZLO MEDALS
AWARDED.*Women Win Both Honours.

The de Laszlo medals of the Royal Society of British Artists were awarded recently at the Society's galleries in Suffolk Street.

The silver medal was won by Miss Ethel Gabain, and the bronze medal by Miss Dorothea Selous. They were awarded for the best pictures in the society's exhibition, which will open at the galleries today.

Miss Gabain is Mrs. John Copley, the artist, and, like her husband, she is a lithographer.

Miss Selous (Mrs. Dorothea Jamieson) is a portrait painter and artist potter. Both have exhibited at the Royal Academy and the Paris Salon.

CENTENARY TRIBUTE TO EDMUND KEAN

The centenary of the death of Edmund Kean was observed in London recently when Dame Madge Kendal laid a laurel wreath on the statue of the famous actor in the foyer of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, and Sir Frank Benson, in the absence through illness of Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, paid a tribute to Kean's memory. Later Professor Boas addressed a meeting of the women's section of the London Municipal Society on Kean's work and art.

Opera Repertory And
The Public*Spirited Plea From Famous
Conductor*COVENT GARDEN NOVELTIES

(By SIR THOMAS BEECHAM, BT.)

This is a plea addressed to the English musical public, and more particularly opera-goers, to extend the range of their interests.

It is not true that the whole of music is comprised in the works of two composers and two only, though such is an illusion widely cherished in this country. At one time the two and two only were Handel and Mendelssohn, afterwards Bach and Beethoven. The only two seriously accepted to-day seem to be Wagner and Brahms.

The cult of the serious and of the enormous should not be allowed to exclude all else, or we shall rule out of our musical experience much that might contribute charm and delight to life. But the London opera-goer has always been inclined to narrowness of view.

Time was when the Covent Garden subscribers knew half-a-dozen operas or so—"Carmen," "Huguenots," Gounod's "Faust," and so on. "Lohengrin" was acceptable if Alhambra and Jean de Reszke were in the cast, but the later Wagner was regarded as a strange diet for aesthetes and specialists only. To-day the later Wagner is almost the only music to which the Covent Garden subscribers are wholeheartedly addicted.

The basis of the operatic repertory needs broadening. It is true that it is much more difficult to stage the non-Wagner opera owing to the scarcity of good singers in the world to-day, but the fact remains that every other country in the civilised world has a larger operatic repertory than has England.

Sir Thomas Replies.

Not even in Germany is Wagner regarded as the only composer of operas. Far from it. To-day in Germany Wagner is rivalled by Verdi, and last year in Vienna the opera that was most frequently performed was Verdi's "Don Carlo." It is worth remembering that two-thirds of the great operatic repertory is non-German.

And yet I am asked, regarding the current season at Covent Garden, "Why 'Don Carlo'? Why Berlioz's 'Faust'?"—as though the selection were some pleasant whim on my part. I am reminded how, during a season of Russian opera a couple of years ago at the Lyceum Theatre, hundreds had to be turned away when the familiar pieces were given, but those hundreds would not risk their money on a new opera. I take this opportunity of making a modest request, namely, that it should be believed that when I produce a new work it is done out of a conviction of its interest and value, and not from a desire to impose upon the public something inferior and boring.

Berlioz's Unpopularity.

Although Berlioz's "Damnation de Faust" was not actually written for the theatre, the great work is more at home there than in the concert-room, as I know from my impressions, as a boy, from the Carl Rosa Opera Company's performances which I saw some 40 years ago at Liverpool (with Halle conducting)—not to speak of more recent productions abroad.

Berlioz was essentially a dramatic composer, and if his "Faust" was not actually composed for the stage the explanation probably is his unpopularity with the opera management of the time. The truth is that his music was too good for the French public taste of the day. When dramatic music is of a superior quality the usual thing to say—at first, at all events—is that music so good cannot be dramatic.

In our times this is said about the finest, the most poetic, and most musical opera composed in the last thirty years; I mean Delius's "Village Romeo and Juliet." Between 1830 and 1850 Berlioz was writing the best music in Europe. The germs of almost everything that has been done since are to be found in his compositions of that period.

Berlioz's "Faust" is the most dramatic of all Fausts. Although it is not so much like a musical comedy as some others, it contains a bunch of the loveliest tunes in existence. Also it is comparatively short, whereas most operas are too long. In fact, there is nothing to prevent its success in the opera house except the greatness of the music.

A phenomenon that is not easily explicable, although it is obvious enough, is the vividness that music which was dramatically conceived takes on when adequately accompanied by a stage setting. Those who have heard Berlioz's "Troyens" only as a concert piece cannot imagine the full effect made by the opera. In the theatre the least of the orchestral phrases, the least touch of colour is found to live with unexpected effect. The form of the concert cantata is but a makeshift. The staging of "La Damnation de Faust" requires no apology.

New Arrangement.

As for "Don Carlo," I would assert that both poem and music rose to heights not reached before in the long series of Verdi's earlier operas. It was not, as first written, so consummate a whole as "Aida." In the five-act version it is unmanageably long. Yet there is music here more like "Aida" than anything Verdi had written before, and much of the beautiful work is fully equal to the later opera. In the new arrangement, in a prologue and three acts, made for the production at Covent Garden, the aim has been to retain all the admirably lyrical music. What has been rejected is some of the less interesting declamatory pages.

JUBILEE OF ROYAL
MUSIC COLLEGE*Visit Of The Prince Of Wales.

In his official capacity of President of the Royal College of Music the Prince of Wales recently visited the college and was entertained at dinner by the council, the director, and Fellows, and afterwards more informally by the students in a light-hearted programme of song and dance in the Parry Opera Theatre.

Miss Penelope Spencer, besides dancing herself, was responsible for the arrangement of the dances, for which music had been composed by various professors and members of the college—an overture by Malcolm Sargent, a suite by Herbert Howells, a Fugal Blues by Guy Warrack, and a Choral Waltz by Gordon Jacob. Songs by Armstrong Gibbs were sung in a stage setting and the operetta Catherine Parr, by Anthony Collins, was revived. A new ballet, Poultry or Love in E.C.S., by Arthur Benjamin, concluded a cheerful and well-mounted entertainment. In the absence through illness of Dr. Malcolm Sargent, Mr. Constant Lambert conducted the orchestra.

NEW ROTARIAN OFFICIALS

President T. B. Wilson
Presides.

ADDRESS BY REV. LEWIS
BRYAN

Hong Kong Rotarians thoroughly enjoyed themselves at yesterday's tiffin held at the Gloucester Building, when the Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan, Chaplain to the Forces, gave a very interesting and witty address.

The tiffin was the first held under the auspices of the new officials and commenced with greetings from the President, Mr. T. B. Wilson who said:

Fellow Rotarians, this being my first day as Official Wielder of the Cavel, I want to thank Dr. Tso on behalf of the newly elected Officers and Directors, for his highly complimentary remarks passed at our last Meeting, and to assure the retiring Officers, Directors, Committee men and the members generally that we will do our utmost to carry on the Club work in a manner satisfactory to you.

We hope to continue the good work that has been started and to develop and inaugurate new means of furthering Community Service.

"We hope to strengthen our Club, not by the indiscriminate bringing in of new Members—for a large Club is not always a strong Club—but by developing within our Club a stronger feeling of fellowship, and above all by putting into practice the Motto of Rotary "Service above Self."

BALCONY COLLAPSESOwner Questioned At Inquiry.

At the continued hearing of the Coroner's inquiry, held before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court yesterday, into the fatal balcony collapse at 15 Yuk Sau Street on June 3, the owner of the building, Mr. Kwok Wai-sam, was closely questioned.

It was suggested by the counsel for the Contractors, Mr. F. C. Jenkin, that witness had taken a particular and active interest in the construction work, even in the concreting of the floors.

The hearing was adjourned until this afternoon.

The special jury pannelle consisted of Messrs. R. A. Rodgers (foreman), Colbourne Little and Li Koon-chun.

Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K. C., instructed by Messrs. Woo and Nash, appeared for the contractors, Messrs. Wing Tak & Co., Mr. H. J. Armstrong for the architect, Mr. A. J. Lane, and Mr. M. K. Lo, for the owner of the house, Mr. Kwok Wai-sam.

SANITARY BOARD MEETING.*Market Limits.

Reference was made at the meeting of the Sanitary Board yesterday, to the proposed market limits to Arsenal Street, Lockhart Road and Bowington Road markets, when it was stated that correspondence on the subject was being considered and that decisions would be made later.

Mr. T. Megarry, the President was in the chair, and was supported by the Hon. Mr. A. G. W. Tickle, Vice-President and Messrs. Wong Kwong-tin, F. C. Hall, C. Champkin and C. J. Roe, secretary.

Applications for a trade licence for soap boiling at 57, Belcher's Street, and for the registration of 31-B, Wyndham Street, ground floor, as a dairy, were refused, but the remainder of the applications were granted.

SALE OF A CHILD.Woman Heavily Fined.

Appearing on a remand charge of taking part in the sale of a Chinese boy, aged three, Chan Sze, a widow, was fined $1,000, in default, twelve months' hard labour, by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Magistracy yesterday.

Inspector Elston said that the Police were unable to get into communication with anybody at the Lim Kwong village, Kwongchow, where the defendant said she bought the child. Her relatives were also unable to give any assistance towards tracing the parents of the child, whose identity remained unsolved.

Oh yes, I'm quite all right now

IS YOUR HUSBAND tired and irritable in the evening? Sanatogen would work wonders for him in these difficult days. Do not talk about "nerves" to him though, he would probably object to the word. But you will be astonished and pleased to see how—after taking Sanatogen for a few days—he picks up. He soon becomes like his old self again—strong and healthy, happy at his work and willing to "go somewhere" in the evening.

"I would never have thought that I could get well so quickly and easily. It's all due to Sanatogen! And to think that only a few weeks ago I felt so tired and listless that I really thought I was getting old."

All those signs of nerves—and who does not suffer from nerves in these days—disappear like snow in the sun when Sanatogen is taken. For Sanatogen is made to strengthen weakened nerves—for more than thirty years it has been known over the whole world as a reliable revitaliser. It must do you good.

Start taking Sanatogen now. Your feeling of irritability and "nerviness" will soon disappear. Your appetite will return and you will enjoy sound restful sleep. You will no longer feel tired and run-down for Sanatogen will build up a reserve of strength in your body.

Start a course of this famous nerve-food today. The financial outlay is negligible—a few pence a day—particularly when you can win back health and youth.

The True Tonic-Food
As all Chemists

"Sanatogen is readily absorbed by the stomach and has an immediate and remarkable effect shown by a steady increase of strength and energy. At the same time the colour is brought back to the cheeks," writes a physician in the "Medical Press & Circular."

Rise in Prices In America.

No tradition is better grounded in experience than that a Government's popularity is determined largely by the question whether prices, during its official tenure, are rising on the Stock Exchange and the staple markets, or whether the reverse movement prevails. It can certainly not be said that prosperity in the familiar sense has returned since the first week of March, but to the average American mind rapidly rising prices are a harbinger of such return. A "good stock market" sometimes means more to a new political administration than a "good press" to an aspiring author. Mr. Roosevelt has thus far enjoyed this advantage to the full. Compilations of average prices for commodities show advances, since March began, reckoned by the various compilers at 6 to 10 per cent.; the stock market "averages" have risen over 40 points and, along with this, unmistakable signs of at least considerable betterment in business have appeared. As the United States dollar continues to slump, Wall Street prices continue to rise to new levels. In view of the depths to which not only stock and commodity prices had previously fallen, but business activities had contracted, these striking changes of the past months have brought relief, if not indeed reviving enthusiasm. In large measure they have been ascribed to the energetic measures taken at Washington to meet the public deficit and avert the "banking crisis." In so far as markets responded to the resultant change in public sentiment, their action has properly enhanced the prestige of the Roosevelt Administration. Unfortunately, however, the fact that the wildest kind of currency-inflation proposals had been laid before Congress, that the President's attitude regarding them was left uncertain, and that he had allowed the dollar to depreciate abroad, inevitably prompted argument that the rise in prices simply indicated an

"inflation market." Acceptance of that theory was bound to have the dangerous result of instilling the belief among impulsive reasoners that, if the welcome recovery had actually been caused by an "inflation policy," the inflationists should be allowed to have their way without let or hindrance. Now, it is quite true that any country's inflation and depreciation of its currency will advance prices, for both commodities and stocks. Germany's paper inflation of 1923 brought average staple prices, as measured by "The Frankfurter Zeitung," to forty-nine billion times those of 1914, and average prices of stocks to six billion times those of 1922. That is doubtless not the kind of inflation that Washington oracles contemplate, yet the underlying principle at least is the same. But the contention that the recovery of the past three months is evidence simply of an "inflation market" has encountered some rather formidable objections. It is rejoined that the United States has as yet indulged in little internal currency inflation; that, on the contrary, Federal Reserve notes in circulation, even allowing for the special descriptions authorized in March, are a thousand million dollars less than on March 15. Further, and still more to the point as evidence of general tendencies, we are reminded that, as against this past season's rise, the "commodity average" rose 3 to 9 per cent. during the three months ending last September, while stocks advanced 38 points. That recovery was commonly ascribed, not at all to "inflation probabilities" but to the ending of the outflow of Reserve Bank gold and the resultant inference that gold payments were assured. More than this, the vigorous recovery of 1932 indicated, as the recovery of the past four months has done, that in the absence of unsettling accidents "deflationary" forces had pretty much spent their force. Probably the economic histories will continue into the longer future the dispute whether inflation or normal recuperation caused the movement of prices, thus far in 1933. It is yet to be determined how long the movement will last. Conclusions will also doubtless be influenced by the course of events in the Government's attitude towards the currency. The recovery in prices has been accelerated by uncertainty or apprehension regarding that question. But that other, more far-reaching and more permanent influences have provided a potent impetus for the present financial and industrial recovery, there is little reasonable doubt.

HITLER THE MODERN MAHOMET

HERO OF GERMANY

HIS RARE GIFT OF INSPIRATION AND PROPHECY

(By George Slocombe.)

Berlin. The Nazi Revolution has given Germany a religion and a hero. Therein is the secret of its immediate and profound triumph.

Whereas the 1918 Revolution had overthrown a monarchy only to replace it by a hydra-headed bureaucracy; whereas in crisis after crisis since the war, mentally bankrupt or impotent German statesmen had yielded ground to statesmen to be proven within a year of two equally ineffectual, the revolution of 1933 has replaced Germany's post-war doctrine of defeatist opportunism by an intense religious exaltation.

It has decapitated, with a single stroke of the administrative sword, the hundred heads of the police-ridden democracy that languished under the ill-fated Constitution of Weimar. It has achieved, as Bismarck never dared attempt, the unification and the fusion of the federal States of the German Republic under a single central authority, with a single doctrine, a single leader, a single law.

It has driven thousands of Liberal or Socialist Civil Servants from positions of power, and subjugated the entire machinery of the most powerful bureaucracy in the world to its dogma and its dictates. It has reduced to farce the position of Von Papen and Hugenberg in the so-called National Coalition.

It has humiliated Hitler's associates or rivals so far that the suppression of so powerful a newspaper as the "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" and the rumoured arrest of General Von Schleicher no longer brings more than a smile of derision to the lips of the dwindling minority of sceptics in Germany. It has driven into exile, or rendered politically and financially impotent, all reasoned opposition.

And, most profound, most significant achievement of all, it has restored not the monarchy, but the feudal notion of monarchy: a liege lord half-divine. It has resurrected, like an authentic royal emblem of stage properties, the ancient theory of kingship.

Fuhrer, Duce, Caesar — three names for a single symbol. The half-mystical authority which clothes a man and makes him a hero of mythology. Norse giant or Germanic knight, Luther or Cromwell, Hitler or Mussolini — the romantic Germans, so medieval beneath their modernism so primitive at heart under their external paper mache civilization of machines and mass production, have found their hero at last.

This, I feel, is the secret of the moral and political transformation which Germany has undergone during the past few weeks.

There is no other word for it than transformation. You see the difference in the manner, the look, the bearing of the nation.

The new spirit is in the clipped imperious style of the Nazi newspapers (and which of them are not Nazi now?)

It is in the sermons of Catholic bishop and Protestant divine, the running commentary of the unseen news-reel editor, the admonition of a sports captain to his team, the plays and songs of the new Nazi theatre and the new Nazi opera.

In all the manifestations of the national life it proclaims upon a tone of absolute, of religious conviction, the fact that all German hands and all German brains are henceforth to be devoted to the achievement of the unity, the equality and the predominance of the German race.

No such exclusively racial ideal has ever been adopted before in Europe as the political doctrine of a nation. It is a concept to which our loosely designed frontiers, our inextricably mixed races, our sovereigns and statesmen of confused lineage, our capitalist and financial institutions of international origin, are totally alien. Yet they will have to accustom themselves to the new political theory, for whether we like it or not it has come to stay in Germany.

In spite of many anomalous and bewildering objections, in spite of history, biology and political evolution, Germany is a new, a disturbing and an utterly foreign element in the structure of Europe. It is anachronistic, if you like. But the important thing to remember, as a brilliant non-German Jew said to me a few days ago, is that not only has Germany put the clock back, but the hands are still moving backwards.

One instance of this can be seen in Hitler's economic policy. This policy, like every phase of the Nazi programme, has not been hastily improvised by a Dictator flushed with unexpected victory, and forced to find expedient after expedient to satisfy public curiosity.

It has been carefully thought out. It is not at first sight revolutionary. It does not propose the wholesale nationalisation of banks and industries that some foretold. But in its effect on the economic structure and national life of Germany it will cause a veritable revolution. For the ultimate result of the measures now being discussed by the Nazi leaders in Germany will be the destruction of the great industrial and financial state laboriously erected in Germany during the first quarter of this century — the cumbersome, complicated, incredibly artificial state symbolised by the immense horizontal trusts of the late Hugo Stinnes.

In its place will grow a state of small farmers, craftsmen, professional and manual workers, a pyramid with agriculture as its base.

Hitler's Third Reich will be a state, highly militarised with a large army and immense government enterprises to absorb the surplus population.

It will be a state of high prices and small fortunes. The big capitalists and the big bankers will diminish in numbers, in wealth, and in political power. There will be rigid government control of industry and finance. There will be a low, if uniform, standard of living. It will be an ascetic, a Spartan state, of austere puritanical manners and modes of thought. Economically a farmer state like Denmark. Politically like the England of Cromwell.

Already Hitler's associates have taken steps to realise their new economic policy. They have announced their intention to raise agricultural prices and to break up — in the teeth of the opposition of their Nationalist partners — the great landed properties in Prussia.

They have already, by the control over imports which the State exercises through the Reichsbank restrictions on the purchase of foreign currencies, begun severely to limit the purchase of raw materials abroad. A controlled inflation of the mark is already in process, and was, indeed, with the gold reserves of the Reichsbank under 8 per cent., practically inevitable.

REGISTRATION OF TRADE-MARKS

Loxley And Co. Charge Infringement.

ENGLISH REGISTRATION APPLICABLE HERE?

The question as to whether the registration of a trade-mark in England by a foreign firm is applicable to Hong Kong, was the point of discussion at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Leung Siu Kee, proprietor of shops at No. 621 and 125, Queen's Road Central, was proceeded against for "possession of hair lotion containing a 'girl trade-mark' resembling the 'Pompeia' trade-mark of Messrs. L. T. Piver of Paris, for whom Messrs. Loxley and Company of Hong Kong are agents."

Mr. O. E. C. Marton appeared for Messrs. Loxley and Company, and the defendant was represented by Mr. F. X. D'Almada.

Mr. D'Almada remarked that the argument before the Court was to prove that the trade-mark was registered in Hong Kong.

Mr. Marton replied that before Messrs. Loxley and Company took over the agency in 1928, the bottles were on sale in Hong Kong since 1924.

In 1928 Messrs. L. T. Piver applied in Hong Kong for the registration of their "Pompeia" trade-mark, but this was refused as it conflicted with a trade-mark of Messrs. A. E. Atkinson, of England. Mr. Marton said that the trade-mark was registered in France, where the goods were manufactured, and also in England. He submitted that by virtue of the registration in France, and particularly in England, the trade-mark was applicable to Hong Kong. He then quoted authorities in support of this argument.

Mr. D'Almada quoted the Trade-Mark Ordinance of Hong Kong stating, "that" all trade-marks must be registered in respect of particular goods or classes of goods."

"The trade-mark of the 'Pompeia' products were not, and could not be registered in Hong Kong, because another one was already there," said Mr. D'Almada. He suggested that Messrs. L. T. Piver could have applied to Messrs. Atkinson to register their trade-mark and with their consent applied for registration in Hong Kong.

In his second point Mr. D'Almada submitted that the registration in England was not applicable to Hong Kong.

Hong Kong had its own Ordinances which particularly state that it is essential to register trade-marks in respect of particular goods or class of goods.

The Trade-Mark Act of 1905 in England was not applicable to Hong Kong as Hong Kong was not included in the list. Australia, Canada, Ceylon and other places were mentioned, but not Hong Kong, said Mr. D'Almada.

Mr. D'Almada also pointed out that unregistered trade-marks were not protected under criminal law in respect of forged trade-marks. The complainants were not registered, could not be registered, and had been refused registration in Hong Kong. "The defendant has no case to answer on the question of law," concluded Mr. D'Almada.

Mr. Marton said that an Order in Council was made in England in 1884 in respect to trade-marks and it was to be assumed that it was applicable to Hong Kong, as one of the Colonies.

In reply to a cable sent by Messrs. Loxley and Company the Paris firm registered in France, England and Berne, "It may be inferred from this cable," said Mr. Marton, "that the trade-mark is definitely registered."

Case To Answer. In holding that the defendant had a case to answer, the Magistrate, Mr. W. Schofield, remarked that his decision was based on the assumption that the registration in England was in order.

Mr. Marton asked if the cable could be accepted as sufficient evidence, but Mr. D'Almada remarked that he would like to see an official copy of the registration.

The Magistrate replied that in such a case he would have to put the case over for two months, if the defence was not prepared to accept the cable as conclusive evidence.

Mr. D'Almada replied that as His Worship had decided that he had a case to answer, he would, for the sake of argument, accept the cable.

The hearing of the case was then adjourned until July 20, at 2.30 p.m.

BRITAIN'S TRADE IMPROVEMENT

Increasing Confidence In Industry.

UNEMPLOYMENT DECLINES

London, To-day.

The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Walter Runciman, was detained at the World Economic Conference when the Board of Trade vote was considered in the House of Commons, yesterday evening. In his absence, Dr. E. L. Burgin, Under-Secretary for the Department, said that the trade position and the prospects of the country could be summarised in the phrase, "General improvement is definite and marked in conditions of restrained but increasing confidence."

The tendency of international trade to decline, he said, had not yet been arrested, but the position of the export trade of the United Kingdom was certainly not unsatisfactory in the light of world trade as a whole.

Improvement, he said, had been widespread, and covered 90 out of 100 of industrial groups and 600 out of 700 of the whole of areas for which statistics were available. There was a notable improvement in building, cotton, wool, engineering, boots and shoes, motorcars and shipbuilding.

There was a further substantial improvement in employment during the month of May, this being the fourth successive monthly improvement. At the end of May, 9,657,000 insured persons were in employment or 120,000 more than in the preceding month and 372,000 more than in January. This was the highest volume of employment among insured persons at any time since September 1930.

All British industry was healthier than for some time past, and industrial and commercial activity would respond very quickly to the successful results in the international field.

The total volume of world trade was continuing to shrink. Great Britain's share was maintained, but it was a somewhat melancholy satisfaction when they thought of the tremendous interest they had in the maintenance of the volume of total world trade.

Referring to trade agreements, Dr. Burgin said that their result had been to give help in the balance of trade and for the first five months of the present year that balance showed an improvement of £30,000,000 over last year—British Wireless Service.

FITTER COMMENDED IN COURT.

Arrested A Thief.

"If there were a few more like you, there would be no snatching in Hong Kong," remarked Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning, in commending a Chinese fitter, Yun Tai, for bringing about the arrest of a thief.

The defendant Wan Man Kung had snatched a packet of cigarettes from a stall in Spring Garden Lane, and on the cries of the stall-keeper, the fitter gave chase and caught the defendant, handing him over to the Police.

Contractors' Case Adjourned.

The case in which the Wang Ngai Company of No. 5, Heard Street, Wanchai, are claiming $845.29 from Concrete Products Ltd., being the balance allegedly due for work done and materials supplied, was adjourned this morning to July 20, after a short hearing before the Puisne Judge, Mr. L. E. Lindsell.

Mr. C. Y. Kwan appeared for the plaintiffs and Mr. T. P. K. Kemble for the defendants.

EMBEZZLEMENT BY A SHROFF

Watson & Co. Employee Gaoled.

EUROPEAN CUSTOMERS' PAYMENTS STOLEN

Tsang Kim, a shroff employed by Messrs. A. S. Watson and Company, was this morning sentenced to two months' hard labour on a charge of embezzling $1,207.52 from his employers. The case was tried by Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Magistracy.

Mr. O. E. C. Marton, of Deacons, appearing for the plaintiffs, asked His Worship to try the case summarily, as restitution for the losses had been made.

The embezzlement was part of the monies collected by the defendant over a period from March 1 to May 27. The payments alleged to have been retained in the possession of the defendant were stated to have been collected from the Hon. Mr. Paul Lauder, Mr. C. F. Hyde, Mrs. Hope, Talkoo Docks, Mr. R. Keown, the Luk Hoi Hotel, the Majima Hospital and the King's Dispensary.

BOY VICTIMISED BY THIEVES.

District Watchmen Commended.

"You are a scoundrel for stealing from a small boy," Mr. Wynne-Jones told Wong Chuen this morning at the Central Police Court when Wong 20, and Leung Wai-tin, 12, were charged with the theft of a fountain pen.

The accused youths were followed yesterday on Queen's Road Central, by two District Watchmen, and were caught in the act of stealing a fountain pen from Ng Wal, aged 14.

"These District Watchmen are very clever," remarked His Worship, in commending District Watchmen No. 52 and No. 132.

Sentence of six months was imposed on the "carpenter," Wong Chuen. Leung Wai-tin was ordered to receive six strokes.

WHERE TRAMS ARE DANGEROUS

Many Casualties In Leningrad System.

10 COLLISIONS PER DAY

Helsingfors. Some alarming facts are given in a statement on the conditions of the tramways in Leningrad, by a former German Consul there. Among other things he says that:

Tram collisions during the first nine months of 1932 totalled 2,640, or nearly 10 a day.

Trams that jumped the rails, numbered 1,911 or an average of seven a day.

There were 277 fatal accidents or slightly more than one a day, including 73 children killed.

People injured numbered 2,468 including 391 children.

Although the total length of tramway lines has increased from about 88 miles in pre-war days to 210 miles to-day, the number of tramcars available has decreased from 1,777 to 814.—Reuter.

MORTGAGE LOAN FOR EX-EMPRESS.

Hungarian National Bank's Advance.

Budapest.

The Pension Fund of the Hungarian National Bank has, it is stated here, granted a mortgage for a considerable sum of money on property of the ex-Empress Zita.

Part of the property, it is understood, consists of two apartment-houses with shops on the ground floor in the Apolloni Ter and some agricultural property.

The newspaper "Pest Naplo" states that this is the first large mortgage made since 1931, when many banks were obliged to shut their doors. The paper adds that the ex-Empress has sought a mortgage because of the effects of the crisis on rents and agricultural returns and also on account of high taxation.—Reuter.

To-day's Short Story.

THE GREEN FLY

By Kalman Mikszath.

THE old peasant, the richest man in the village, lay very ill at the point of death. God was holding judgment over him, pointing to him as an example for all mankind:

"Look at John Gal. What do you mortals imagine yourselves to be? You are nothing. Now, John Gal is really somebody. Even the county judge shakes his hand occasionally. The Countesses of the village come and visit him. He is the richest among you. Still, I could smite him. I did not have to send a hungry wolf to bite him, nor do I have to uproot a giant oak to fall upon and crush him. A tiny fly will do the work."

That is what actually happened. A fly bit his hand; it soon began to swell, becoming blacker and redder. The priest and the lady of the Castle persuaded him to call a doctor.

He would have been willing to have the surgeon sent for, but they prevailed upon him to telegraph for a specialist to Budapest. Professor Birli was chosen. One visit would cost three hundred florins, but that was money well spent.

"Nonsense," said the peasant, "that tiny fly couldn't have caused three hundred florins' worth of damage in me."

The Countess insisted and offered to pay the doctor's bill herself. This did the trick. John Gal was a proud peasant. The telegram was dispatched and a young man, slim and bespectacled—not at all imposing—arrived in the carriage that had been sent to meet him at the station.

Mrs. Gal, the young wife of the elderly peasant, received him at the gate.

"Are you the famous Doctor from Budapest?" she asked. "You had better come and look at my husband. He's making as much fuss over a fly-bitten hand as if he'd been bitten by an elephant."

This was absolutely untrue. John Gal had never said a word; never even mentioned the bite unless he was asked, and even then he was extremely curt. He lay on his bed indifferent and stoical. His head rested on a sheepskin, his pipe in his mouth.

"What's the trouble, old man?" asked the Doctor. "I understand a fly bit you."

"That's it," answered the peasant between his teeth.

"What sort of fly was it?"

"A green fly," he said curiously.

"You just question him, Doctor," interrupted the woman. "I shall have to look after my work. I have nine loaves in the oven."

"All right, mother," said the Doctor absent-mindedly.

She turned upon him immediately as if stung, her hands on her hips: "Why, you're old enough to be my father!" she said, half offended and half flirting. "You don't seem to see well through those windows on your eyes."

She turned quickly about and the many starched skirts whirled like the wind as she walked out, erect with the sense of youth and strength.

The Doctor followed her with his eyes. She was devilish pretty, much younger than the doctor, and of course very much younger than her husband. He wanted to mutter some sort of apology, but she was gone before he could say a word.

"Well, let's see that hand. Does it hurt?"

"Quite a good deal," was the answer.

The doctor examined the swollen hand, and his face assumed a grave look.

"Bad enough. It must have been a poisonous insect."

"Maybe," said John without the least emotion. "I could tell it wasn't an ordinary kind."

"It was a fly that had come from a dead body."

A mute curse was all John Gal vouchsafed for this information.

"It was lucky I arrived in time. We can still do something. To-morrow it would have been too late. You'd have been dead."

"That's strange," said the peasant, pressing the tobacco into his pipe with one thumb.

"Blood-poisoning works fast. We have no time to lose. You must harden your nerves, old man. Your arm will have to come off."

"My arm?" he asked with surprise and a touch of sarcasm, and a great deal of resignation.

"Yes. It has to be done." John Gal did not say a word; he only shook his head and went on smoking.

"You see," the Doctor went on in his persuasive tone, "it will not hurt you. I shall put you to sleep, and when you wake up you will be saved. Otherwise, to-morrow at this time you'll be as dead as a mouse. Not even God can save you."

"Oh, leave me alone," he said, as though he were tired of so much talk; turned to the wall, and closed his eyes.

The Doctor was quite unprepared for such stubbornness. He left the room and went to have a word with the woman.

"How is my husband?" she asked with such indifference as she could muster, continuing her work at the same time in order to show her contempt for the Doctor.

"Bad enough. I just came to ask you to try and persuade him to let me amputate his arm."

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed, turning as white as the apron before her. "Must it be done?"

"He will die otherwise within twenty-four hours."

Her face turned red, as she took the Doctor by the arm. She dragged him into the sickroom, and there, placing her hands on her hips, addressed him:

"Do I look like a woman who would be satisfied to be the wife of a cripple? I'd die of shame. There! Just look at him!" She turned to her husband and almost shouted: "Don't you let him cut your arm off, John. Don't you listen to him!"

The old peasant gave her a friendly look.

The first and most important requisite in tennis is what I shall call good physique. By this I mean soundness of limb, strength of arm and wrist, good stamina and nimbleness. All this accompanied by the necessary physical culture and also good vision.

This physical side represents in my opinion 50% of what goes to make a good tennis player, and under this same heading I include physical reflexes and even mental.

Add to this, steady intensive practice with an opponent; which represents 25%; while the third requisite, also 25%, is what we can call the moral side; a very important one and the lack of it often precludes a very promising player from ever becoming great.

This moral side can best be defined as the will to win.

ROZA-PEREIRA BROTHERS SHINE

Wong Suen Man and Yeung Hang Wah Outstanding in Keen Struggle

(By CRAWL)

The Victoria Recreation Club last night defeated the Combined Hong Kong and Canton South China Athletic Associations by 2 goals to 1 in a water polo game at the South China Bathing Pavilion, North Point.

The game was disappointing from more points of view than one. It was a very scrappy game and the final score was a poor indication of the run of the play.

To say that the winners deserved their victory would be putting the cart before the horse, for at no stage during the game were they the masters of the Chinese team.

The Combined Associations played a brilliant game and had their forwards taken full advantage of their scoring opportunities they would have turned the tables on their formidable opponents.

C. Roza-Pereira was the best of the V.R.C. men, his two-handed play standing him in good stead. His brother, L. Roza-Pereira made an ideal centre forward, but lacked stiling in his shots.

Ambrose on the right wing was very poor, persisting in shoving off his opponents.

The Chinese backs, Wong Suen-man and Yung Hang-wah, played a splendid game, especially the latter, who, during the second half of the game had C. Roza-Pereira, the V.R.C.'s left winger, completely bottled up.

Chinese Pivot Good.

Wong Ki-leung, the Chinese pivot, was also very good and did not give L. Roza-Pereira a free rein.

J. R. Soares, one of the V.R.C.'s oldest playing members, was too slow and clearly showed that he has passed his prime. His tackling was very doubtful at times, and he should have been warned on more than one occasion for shoving off.

Gittins, the V.R.C. right back, played a good game, but he secured very little support from his colleagues.

Undoubtedly the outstanding feature of the game was the wonderful passing and understanding among the Chinese team. Their defence was magnificent, while at times they held the V.R.C. goal at their mercy, but failed to take advantage of their golden opportunities.

The Chinese started off in great style, taking possession from the swim up. A nice passing bout saw Kwok Chun-hang send in a shot which Knight tipped over for a fruitless corner.

V.R.C. Open Scoring.

The Chinese team gained possession from the goal throw, but failed to take advantage of a clear passage, Wong Ki-leung taking his time with only Knight to beat. Gittins robbed him of the ball which was sent up to C. Roza-Pereira. The latter swam round seeking an opening, but seeing none passed the ball to his brother L. Roza-Pereira who scored after tipping the ball over Wong Suen-man to net from close-in.

The swim up again saw the Chinese in possession and a brilliant bout of passing which had the V.R.C. team baffled was disrupted when Cheung Wing-kwong missed from within scoring range. Just before the interval, the V.R.C. went further ahead through C. Roza-Pereira, who neatly tipped the ball from his left to right-hand

KWOK CHUN-HANG (H.K. S.C.A.A.) who missed a wonderful opportunity of levelling the scores in the match between the V.R.C. and the Chinese by missing the penalty awarded him.

NAVY FORCED TO A DRAW

Chinese B.C. Score In Last Minute.

(By CRAWL)

A very even game of water polo was seen at the Chinese Civil Servants' Club last night when the Royal Navy and the Chinese Bathing Club shared four goals in a League game.

The Navy, who were strengthened by the inclusion of McCrae at centre half, were unlucky to lose their goal lead in the last minute of the game when Tsang Ho-fook swam through down the right touch-line to net with a back-skip.

The Chinese Bathing Club are in the unfortunate position of having several good polo players like Leung Shui-man, who are unable to get off their duties in time to play, otherwise they would probably be one of the strongest teams in the League.

The Navy opened the scoring after three minutes' play through Slade, who swam into the C.B.C. goalmouth to score easily.

They went further ahead a few minutes later through Barber, who scored during a melee. In the second half the pace began to tell on the Navy players who carelessly left Yeung Wal-lim unmarked. He swam through and easily beat Jones.

A breakaway on the right wing by Tsang Ho-fook saw the C.B.C. equalise just on time.

Royal Navy: Jones; Walker and Barker; McCrae; Grover, Slade and Middleton.

C.B.C.: Chan Chi-ching; Tong Po-man and Lau Yam-chung; Wong Yat-hung; Yeung Wal-lim, Tong Po-cheung and Tsang Ho-fook.

Referee—Mr. Ip Kun-im.

Chinese Miss Opportunities.

In the second half the V.R.C. more than met their match when time after time the Chinese team came near to scoring.

A bad tackle by H. M. Remedios was followed by another: 'Infringement' a few minutes later, and the referee ordered him out of the water for ducking Kwok Chun-hang within the two yard mark. The latter was awarded a penalty, but he failed to score.

A few minutes later the Chinese scored through Wong Ki-leung, who, unmarked, swam into the V.R.C. goalmouth to score.

V.R.C.: T. L. Knight; J. R. Soares and S. V. Gittins; H. M. Remedios (captain); F. W. Ambrose, L. Roza-Pereira and C. Roza-Pereira. Combined Associations: Kwok Mok-hoi (H.K.); Wong Suen-man (H.K.); and Yeung Hang-wah (C.); Wong Ki-leung (H.K.); Cheung Wing-kwong (C.); Kwok Chun-hang (H.K.) and Chan Ki-chung (C.).

Schreuder Nets Eight Times.

SOUTH CHINA "B" OUTCLASSED (By CRAWL).

The European Y.M.C.A. "A" team scored another overwhelming victory in the Hong Kong Water-polo League last night, when they defeated South China "B" by 11 goals to nil at the Chinese Civil Servants' Club.

The winners were vastly superior to the Chinese team who wasted much time in shooting when an opportunity presented itself.

Schreuder, the "Y" skipper, was again top scorer with 8 goals, and, although not fully extended, he was compelled to pile on the score by the excellent openings made.

Tong Sin-kee, the Chinese centre, wasted many good opportunities by throwing wildly, while both his wing forwards, Wong Yun-man and Wong Siu-cheong were lying too far back to be of any use.

Leung Lai-sang, the South China goal keeper, was outstanding and did extraordinarily well between the sticks. The Y.M.C.A. opened the scoring from the swim up, Schreuder netting with a powerful backhand. Ralston added the "Y's" second a few seconds later when he swam through unchallenged.

The "Y" had everything their own way and before the interval had scored on five more occasions through Schreuder (4) and Ralston.

In the second half the Chinese team was completely outplayed by the Y. M. C. A., who scored four more goals through Donn and Schreuder (3).

Y.M.C.A.—H. Angus; A. G. Donn and R. Goldman; E. W. Ralston; W. F. Kerr; W. Schreuder (captain) and W. Campbell. S.C.A.A. "B"—Leung Lai-sang; Po King-fook and Tse Kim-hung; Leung Yun-hung; Wong Siu-chong, Tong Sin-kee and Wong Yi-man. Referee—Mr. Ip Kun-im.

Keep The Left Arm As Loose As Possible

BY JOYCE WETHERED.

THE advocacy of a straight left arm has, I think, been sometimes quite wrongly criticised. This comes from an idea frequently existing in the player's mind that a rigid poker-like movement is meant.

Such rigidity would go entirely contrary to the principle of the swings of all the best exponents of the straight-left-arm method.

To feel that the left arm should be as long as loose as possible is nearer the mark.

To produce a firm shot the left arm must be straight at impact.

To ensure accuracy and roundness of swinging, the longer the left arm is kept straight the better. Only do not strain and stiffen up.

If the left arm can be as straight as possible throughout, then it is obviously that the club head will be swung in a wide and regular sweep.

If the straightness cannot be maintained towards the top of the swing, the arm must necessarily relax and bend a little, since a forced attitude is never advisable. But it must be remembered that width in swinging always gives more power. With the idea of keeping the Syd Fairweather, another Irishman, is third in the field with Billy Burke, the famous American and Kenyon (West Lancs.). All three had an aggregate of 146.

Garnett (Addington) is the leading amateur with 147. He is in distinguished company with Archie Compston, the former British Ryder Cup player, Joe Kirkwood, the Australian trick golfer, and Vickers.

Gene Sarazen, who lost his American title to Frank Goodman, followed up his 73 with a 75. He is going to be hard pressed to retain his British title.

All the leading American players qualified. The notable non-qualifiers were Percy Alliss, who beat Walter Runyan 2 and 1 in the Ryder Cup contest, and T. A. Bourn, who was beaten by the Hon. Michael Scott in the Final of the British Amateur Championship. Reuter.

arms as long as they can possibly be kept, the left arm will of itself preserve the straightness which is so valuable in forming a regular arc. In approaching it helps to avoid fluffing the shot. BRILLIANT BOWLING BY BOWES

Lancashire Draw With West Indies And Both "A" and "B" Counties Are Defeated

London, To-day.

A record dating back to 1899 was equalled during the week-end county cricket programme, when at Worcester C. C. Dacre, former New Zealand Test player, and Wally Hammond, hero of the English Test team, scored a century in each innings for Gloucester.

This feat equals that of W. L. Foster (140 and 172 not out) and R. E. Foster (134 and 101 not out), the famous brothers. They established the record, also at Worcester, in 1899, against Hampshire.

In spite of these meritorious feats Gloucester had to be content with first innings points.

Brilliant fast bowling by Bowes (12 for 140) gave Yorkshire, the champions, their twelfth win of the season and inflicted on Surrey their second consecutive defeat. Douglas Jardine, the English Test skipper scored 105 out of 252 in a plucky effort to stave off defeat.

Sussex, southern favourites, overcame Kent, who suffered their eighth defeat of the season. Frank Woolley followed up his 198 against Somerset with 53, but the remaining Kent batsmen failed before Maurice Tate (5 for 28).

A brilliant century by Rakewell, Northants' opening batsman, was responsible for the Essex defeat at Kettering, and a century by Arthur Staples gave Notts their fourth win of the season.

Philip Mead, who commenced the June fixtures with 198 against Kent, scored a characteristic 150 against Leicester to give Hampshire the major points. Centuries by Armstrong (164) and Shipman (104) frustrated the Home county from forcing a win.

Cambridge University, making their first appearance at Lord's this season, were beaten by the M.C.C., while the Dark Blues fell before H. D. Leveson-Gower's XI which included Ian Peebles (5 for 44).

A century by Hopwood was the feature of the drawn match between Lancashire and the West Indies. Only Jack Hobbs (Surrey) the Nawab of Pataudi (Worcester), F. G. H. Chalk (Oxford U.), and Dyson (Glamorgan) had previously reached three-figures against the tourists.

Results as cabled by Reuter: County Championship. Northants beat Essex by 7 wickets at Kettering.

"Don't you worry, Kriaka," he assured her. "There'll be no butchering here. I don't intend to die in pieces."

It was in vain that the Doctor spoke to the old man of the darkness of death and the beauties of life. It was to no purpose that he called the Countess from the Castle to plead his suit, and the priest and all the most eloquent and impressive talkers of the village. John Gal remained obdurate. He declined to be cut.

The resignation with which the peasant meets death, without bitterness, without reproach, and without vain tears, was expressed in the calm of his face and the tone of his voice. Death held no terrors for him. If his time was at hand, he was ready to go as his father and his grandfather had gone before him.

It was plain that nothing was to be gained through appeals to the old man to save himself. But at length the very real concern of the almost frantic doctor began to touch the old man's heart. He pitied the fellow's agitation. He was sorry that this man should be so grieved and, half-ridiculously, half-pathetically, John began to console the physician.

Suddenly the Doctor remembered that considerations of money will work wonders where a peasant is concerned. So he said:

"You'll have to pay the three hundred, you know, whether I amputate your arm or not. It would be wasting money not to have the operation. It only takes five minutes."

"Well, you can prescribe some ointment, just to be earning your fee," said the old man, as calmly as if he were bargaining over a pair of boots.

It was no use. Disgusted and disappointed, the Doctor left the man and went out for a walk to think matters over and discuss the problem with some of the village wiseacres. He found little good advice, however, and it was equally in vain to bring the notary and the Justice of the Peace to the patient's bedside. The young woman was always there to offset any wicked plan on the part of the Doctor, and she never missed an opportunity for putting in a word or two to strengthen the obduracy of her husband. The Doctor gave her a wicked glance now and again, and even shouted at her:

"You hold your tongue when men are in conference!" he said.

"The hen is somebody on the cock's dunghill," she retorted, swinging her body.

John Gal hastened to prevent a quarrel.

"Don't get too noisy, Kriaka. You'd better get a bottle of wine for the visitors."

"From which barrel? she asked.

"From the two-hecto barrel." But for my funeral feast you'd better tap the three-hecto barrel: it's getting sour."

He was quite resigned to the idea of death. The visitors drank and left him to make his peace with God.

In the courtyard Doctor Birli met the hired man, a young, powerful-looking fellow, a man-of-all-work.

"Get the carriage ready; I shall be off in half an hour," he said to the didn't hurt him a bit now. He suddenly slapped his forehead and looked up.

"What a stupid fool I was. I should have noticed long ago.... That snake of a woman!"

"No use swearing at the woman, Mr. Gal. She has her youth; she's full of health and life. That's what. She may yet be quite innocent, but after all she'll have to get married after you're gone.... And gone you'll be...."

The old peasant moved with an effort and turned to the doctor, who continued speaking:

"You have nothing to lose if she marries a younger man after you are gone. You wouldn't know anything about it after you're under the earth. And, besides, you ought to be glad she'll have a handsome fellow for a husband. Good-looking chap, Paul!"

The old fellow was crunching his teeth. It sounded as if two tucks had been ground against each other.

"You mustn't be greedy, Mr. Gal. It would be a pity to let that wonderful body of hers waste away without embraces, Paul isn't a fool. He wouldn't let a woman like her pass him by without taking a bite. Besides, she'll have all your money, and the farm. The woman, too, would like to live. The only fool among you three is you, Mr. Gal."

The peasant groaned again and the perspiration covered his forehead. In his heart was bitterness almost ready to overflow.

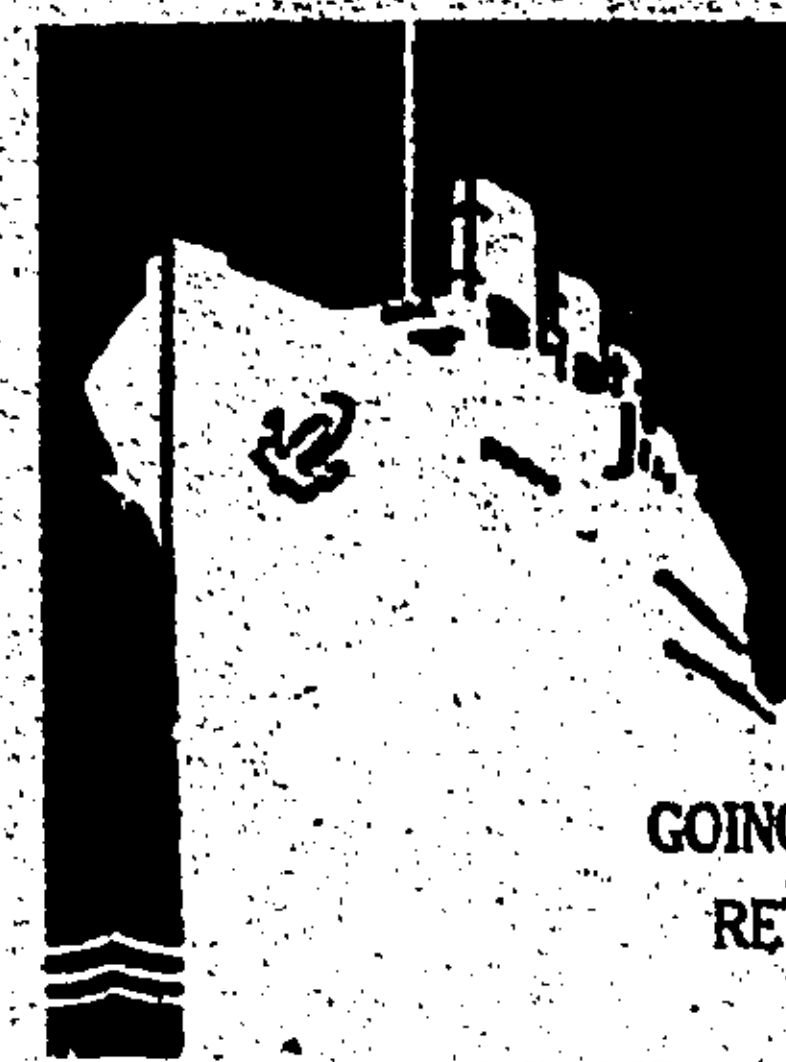

"You see, Mr. Gal, it would be better to hug her with one arm than with none at all."

This was too much for the old man. He jumped up and extended his swollen arm toward the doctor.

"Get your knife, doctor, and cut away!"

TRAGIC BEAUTY OF LONDON

Olga Korzakov Dies
At Nice.

TRICK ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Belgrade.
The death at Nice of Olga Korzakov, a 68-year-old Russian refugee, who once lived in London, recalls the amazing tragedy of her youth, which resulted in a young officer being married, divorced and shot within one hour.

Olga Korzakov lived in Moscow when she was 16. She was the most striking beauty at the Russian Court, where she was taken by her father, who was one of the Tsar's closest friends. Many men clamoured for her hand and among them were officers of all ranks of the Royal Guard. Among these was a young Captain Rozovski.

One night, when Rozovski and his friends were carousing, they heard by chance that Olga's father had been suddenly called away from home. Rozovski conceived a bold plan to win the girl. He went to her house, claimed to have brought a message from her father, saw Olga and persuaded her to accompany him to his apartment. Once there she was forced to join in their feast and stay the night.

On her father's return she told him what had happened. He rushed at once to the Tsar and informed him. The Tsar ordered a special parade of officers, during which Olga picked out Rozovski as the culprit.

The Tsar immediately sent for a priest and ordered him to marry Captain Rozovski to Olga Korzakov. When the ceremony was completed, he ordered him to divorce them immediately. This ceremony was also speedily completed. Then Rozovski's badges of rank were torn from him, he was marched away under escort, and within an hour of being married he was shot.

The dead officer left a huge fortune, which went to his bride of one hour. But she could never forget the tragedy of her wedding. She travelled extensively, lived long in London, Paris and Rome. She died recently in Nice. The news of her death reminded a Russian refugee in Belgrade of her tragic history, which was described in a newspaper article.—Reuter.

BLIND TYPIST ON AIR TOUR.

"A Greater Thrill For Sightless Persons."

Kansas City, Missouri.
Miss Laura Gregory, a 32-year-old blind typist, tells of her sight-seeing tour of the United States by aeroplane.

Miss Gregory, who can type more than 100 letters a day without an error, said she conceived the idea of two week's vacation in the air to show the world that a blind girl can travel alone by plane.

"I can tell when the plane is taking off," Miss Gregory said. "And the steward says I am the best altitude guesser he ever has on his ship. It is a delightful sensation to glide through the air like a bird, and it is an even greater thrill for a blind person than for one who sees everything, because one can imagine such beautiful things. Honestly I feel as if I were sitting on top of the world, in spirit as well as literally."

An accident robbed her of her sight when she was 6 years old. Nevertheless she was graduated from high school, taught later in a school for the blind, then entered business college and finished at the head of her class.—Reuter.

"BLUE" LAWS FADE IN AMERICA

Growing Demand For Sunday Amusements.

LEGISLATION THAT FAILED

New York.

The tide of public opinion in U. S. A. appears to be turning in favour of Sunday amusements, declares Dr. Steiner, professor of sociology in "Americans at Play," one of the monographs sponsored by the Research Committee on Social Trends appointed by former President Hoover. Dr. Steiner observed that failure to suppress Sunday amusements has never been more widespread than at present.

"Legislation restricting both work and play on the Sabbath became quite general during Colonial times and still appears in various forms in the legal codes of most States. While legislation of this kind, in so far as it applies to sports and amusements, is generally regarded as obsolete, these 'blue laws' have not been widely repealed and in some sections of the country, notably in the Eastern and Southern States, the local governments undertake more or less vigorously to bring about their enforcement."

"In the cities of largest size, recreation parks and playgrounds and amusement places generally operate freely the entire week, but in many of the smaller cities and towns Sunday closing of such places is required."

"In some cities the growing demand for Sunday amusements has led to the enactment or more frequently the same purpose is achieved through lax enforcement of Sunday laws allowed to remain on the statute books."

"The failure of law enforcement agencies to suppress Sunday amusements has never been more widespread than at the present time and seems to indicate a definite turning of the tide of public opinion away from the earlier ideas of Sunday observance."—Reuter.

HITLER THE MODERN MAHOMET

The difference between the present inflation and the last is that it is deliberate, and that it is employed by Hitler to raise internal prices and to aid the farmers in their eternal struggle with the mortgage-holding banks.

Whether Germany abandons her present high tariffs or not, she cannot, unless Hitler renounces his entire programme, abandon the import quotas which she now secretly imposes through the severe control of foreign trading practised by the Reichsbank.

In the near future the economic barriers round Germany are likely to be even higher, not lower. Germany, indeed, will be a closed State, a country deliberately practising economic isolation, until German agriculture is not only prosperous again but has absorbed the immense, unemployable surplus of the industrial population.

There will, of course, be inevitable compromises in the actual realisation of the Nazi programme. However ingenious may be the proposal to restore trade to craftsmen and small shop-keepers by the campaign against the big department stores, the peremptory orders issued by Hitler's lieutenants to the big stores to abandon all the activities in which they have hitherto competed with craftsmen and small tradesmen is merely a childish pretext for annoying certain successful departmental store owners of Jewish origin. No glorious economic reconstruction of the State is to be achieved on these lines.

Nevertheless, even in the most fantastic of Hitler's economic proposals (which sometimes bear an amusing resemblance to those of Gandhi), there is to be discovered a certain grain of primitive logic.

In his low, archaic, in his live rather than reasoning mind, Germany can only be saved by a swift return to her simple medieval structure. Moreover, certain of his more arbitrary intentions are forced upon the German Government by the exigencies of the economic situation in which she is placed.

Only a man of heroic proportions could imagine and could carry through a programme so drastic. Hitler is such a man.

He is not gifted intellectually, physically, or artistically. He is not a giant in mind, imagination, or personality. But he possesses the rarer gift of inspiration and of prophecy. And it is as the Mahomet of the twentieth century, possessing a prophet's integrity, a prophetic singleness of vision, a prophetic intensity and a prophetic fire that this man of obscure origins, of modest education, simple habits and native intelligence has imposed his simple revolutionary dogma upon the majority of the German people.

To underestimate the strength of this singular political adventurer is as dangerous as it is fatuous to denounce his whole programme on the strength of its peculiar and intolerable excesses.

It is equally futile to underestimate his moral prestige.

With whatever misgivings Europe may justly regard the Nazi leaders of the German renaissance, with whatever apprehensions of their philosophy and their intentions, let us not deceive ourselves as to their sincerity and the completeness of their triumph.

behalf of the Steering Committee moved the adjournment of the Conference.

Mr. Hull protested and suggested a re-meeting to-morrow. M. Bonnet, and Senor Guido Jung (Italy), suggested to-day, but yielded to Thursday.

They declared, however, that they are very positive that a solution must be found by then, and in their opinion, the best procedure was an adjournment of the Conference as fixed yesterday morning by the Bureau. —Reuter.

Bureau Meeting Yesterday.

MR. HULL'S MEETING WITH MR. MACDONALD.

London, To-day.
The situation created by the statement of the American policy regarding the temporary stabilisation of currencies, was discussed at length in World Economic Conference circles yesterday.

In delegation meetings and in private conversations, the advantages and disadvantages of postponing the proceedings, at least, in regard to the financial work of the Conference, were debated, and it was anticipated that some decision on point might be reached at the meeting of the Bureau of the Conference summoned by the President, for Mr. Ramsay MacDonald yesterday evening. Before the Conference was called, the chief of the American delegation, Mr. William Cordell Hull had an hour's conversation with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

The meeting of the Bureau lasted for 40 minutes. It was announced afterwards that no decision had been reached and that the meeting would be resumed tomorrow morning.

It is understood that this course was taken at the instance of the American representatives who desired further opportunity of explaining President Roosevelt's statement. It was also felt that further consultations with the delegations not represented on the Bureau would take place before that body made any recommendation to the Conference as a whole. —British Wireless Service.

Miss N. Paterson, daughter of the Hon. Mr. J. J. Paterson, was a passenger on the m.s. Asama Maru which left for the North this morning.

Wimbledon Surprises.

America is not to be represented in the Men's Doubles this year. Yesterday L. J. Stoeffen and Clifford Sutter, after winning the first two sets, lost to J. S. Ollis, former British junior champion and a product of St. Paul's School, and J. Wheatcroft, one of the famous tennis family.

The British pair provided the biggest sensation of the day when they emerged victorious after 66 games.

The scores were 5-7, 2-6, 7-5, 11-9 8-6.

Adrian Quist and Don Turnbull, the Australian conquerors of Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill (U.S.A.) were beaten by E. D. Andrews and A. Stedman, winner and runner-up in the New Zealand Championship, after twice holding the lead.

G. P. Hughes and Fred Perry, Britain's Davis Cup pair, were extended to 57 games before eliminating Gentien and Boussus, the young French pair.
